Companies increasingly rely on external vendors to access advanced technologies and services, enhancing their competitiveness and efficiency. However, this also introduces unique risks, as demonstrated by frequent cyber-breach incidents. With many organizations managing hundreds or even thousands of third-party relationships, maintaining oversight of vendor security practices is challenging. The high incidence of breaches linked to third parties, combined with growing regulatory demands, underscores the critical need for effective vendor lifecycle management and risk mitigation practices to safeguard organizational security and compliance.
